

International Water Samples Reported Pure

D. B. Menzies Suggests Well Be Dug Near International Suction Pumps; Estimated Cost $2500.

A long distance telephone call from D. B. Menzies, provincial sanitary engineer, Edmonton, on Tuesday morning revealed that the samples of water taken from the International well last week were pure. He recommended that the council go ahead with the proposal to dig a well near the suction pumps at International.

The proposal to dig such a well came at a special meeting last week, which was attended by Mayor Antrobus, Councillors Abousaffy and George Jenkins; George Kellock, general manager of International Coal Co.; and D. B. Menzies, provincial sanitary engineer. It was the opinion of Mr. Menzies that cattle were causing contamination of the water. He suggested that a well be dug near the International suction pumps. He had taken samples of water from a disused well nearby, and from these samples found the water pure.

It was Mr. Kellock's opinion that the excavation of such a well, with pipes, etc., would not exceed $2500. The well would have an 8 inch concrete wall, 7 feet in diameter, 25 feet deep and built 6 feet above the surface with a strong concrete cover.

At the council meeting on Tuesday evening the council decided to interview the Water and Light Company officials and take some definite action. The meeting was arranged for 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Iron Lung Ready For Any Emergency

Placed in Sun Porch; Fixtures of Sturdy Design.

The iron lung, the gift of Viscount Nuffield, has been set up in the sun porch of the Miners' hospital and is now ready for any emergency. The machine is of sturdy design, the cabinet being made of metal.

The lung is known as the "Both" Cabinet Respirator. The mattress which is rubber of unusual softness, is known as the Dunlopillo Mattress. All the rubber parts were supplied by the Dunlop Company. Accessories on the cabinet include a window through which the doctors are able to see the patient's body without disturbing the patient, a small metal door through which the attendants can reach and administer to the patient, a gauge known as a manometer which registers the pressure inside the cabinet, and in front of the cabinet is a leather head rest. The front of the cabinet is separated, and can be drawn out in order that the patient can be placed inside the cabinet.

A 3-inch hose leads from the cabinet to the respirator, which is driven by an electric motor.

School Bell Rings Once Again

Trustees Cause Drinking Water to Be Shut Off; Many Newcomers.

The laughter of children mingled with the clang of the school bell on Monday morning, as hundreds of Coleman's school kiddies marched back to their classrooms, after two months of luxurious relaxation. All teachers were present.

Due to the drinking water being contaminated the trustees caused the taps to be shut off. The only water available is being used for the wash bowls and lavatories.

Judging from the number of parents present at Central school, a large number of youngsters are starting school for the first time. A full report will be given by Principal Hoyle at the next regular meeting of the trustees.

80 GUNS REGISTERED ON MONDAY

Guns large and small were registered in the council chamber by the R.C.M.P. on Monday. All forms were used up by evening, so that further registrations were deferred till later in the week. Many guns have yet to be registered. Tom Lloyd stalked the office armed to the teeth. He had several slung over his shoulder. Talk about a two-gun-man—he had half a dozen.

Lethbridge to San Diego In One Day

Distances which a few short years ago took days and often weeks to travel now take only a few hours in the giant air liners. Last week Mr. George Kellock left Lethbridge on a T.C.A. plane at 9:30 a.m. making connections with the U.S.A. airlines for Seattle. He spent a couple of hours in that Pacific coast metropolis and then took passage in a 21-passenger plane, reaching his destination at San Diego at 11 o'clock the same evening.

At that city he visited Mrs. Kellock and son, Jim. The latter is taking an aviation course at the Ryan Aeronautical School, Col. Charles Lindbergh was a pupil of the school. Jim is now flying solo and has six hours to his credit. He is also studying radio and other kindred subjects related to aviation.

Bellevue Show Labor Day Attraction

Large Number of Entries From Pass Towns; Exhibits Said to Rival Those of Past Years

Bellevue will stage its annual horticultural show at the arena on Labor Day, September 2. This show is widely known in southern Alberta and is largely attended.

A large number of entries has already been received from gardeners and florists throughout the Pass and the exhibits are said to be among the best ever shown. School pupils have also sent in entries of art, done in the school. These pictures are a source of keen interest and add greatly to the interest of the show. Handwork and Domestic Science also feature the exhibits.

The flower exhibits may hold added interest for Coleman people attending, as it is reported that two Coleman florists, noted for their beautiful flower gardens, may exhibit roses and sweet peas. It is in the flower classes of the show that the Coleman people will be the most interested, as more and more Coleman gardeners are turning towards the raising of flowers and many gardens are beautiful to see. Bellevue and Hiltner gardeners concentrate more in the raising of vegetables. Outside judges are being brought in. All exhibits must be in the hands of the committee by 6 p.m., August 31. No entries will be accepted after that time.

Children's sports will commence at 10 p.m. A dance will end the day's festivities and will be held in the I.O.O.F. hall.

Buy A Ticket on $100 Cash Prize

Drive to Sell 100 More Tickets By Hockey Club Before Making Draw.

The Canadians' hockey executive will make a strong effort to sell 100 more tickets on their draw for a $100 cash prize, on Saturday. Should they be successful the draw will take place at a public gathering next week. If you want a hockey team this winter, co-operate by buying a ticket.

Ticket sale on the above draw has been very slow due to the public refusal to buy. Now that the hockey season is fast approaching and it is the wish of the dyed-in-the-wool hockey fans to have a team, it is expected that the ticket sale will take a new lease of life. Tickets can be had from A. Gentile, G. Nurcombe, G. Burchell or any other member of the executive.

Miss Audrey Halliwell plans on leaving on Sunday morning for a vacation at Penitence and Vancouver.

ESCORT FOR GRACIE AT JASPER

Appearing at Jasper Park Lodge in her first charity concert in the Canadian Rockies recently, Gracie Fiddis made excellent use of the spare time during her mountain visit. It was a red letter hour when she met two of Canada's famous Royal Canadian Mounted Police while strolling in the environs of Outlook Cabin where King George and Queen Elizabeth stayed during their visit a year ago. Walking with the popular comedienne are Sgt. J. W. Faulkner, at Gracie's right, and Const. E. C. R. Woods.

No Cost-Living Bonus Payable Employees Alberta, British Columbia Coal Mines

Commission Report Released By Labor Minister McLarty.

Labor Minister Norman McLarty has released the report of a cost-of-living commission which found that no cost-of-living bonus is payable to employees of coal mining operators in Alberta and British Columbia for the period April 1 to August 31 of this year.

The commission, of which George E. Britnell of the University of Saskatchewan at Saskatoon was chairman, was appointed to inquire into and determine the amounts, if any, to be paid by way of a cost-of-living bonus to coal employees. The other two commissioners were Clement Stubbs of Calgary and Gifford Graham of Nainville, Alta.

Under an agreement between the United Mine Workers of America and coal operators in Alberta and British Columbia there was a provision that bonuses should be paid only if the cost of living since the date of the previous change had increased five per cent or more.

In its report, the commission found that the total weekly cost of the budget of necessities of life was $12 at March 31, 1938, compared with $12.46 at March 31, 1940, indicating an increase in the cost of necessities of life amounting to 46 cents, or 3.9 per cent.

WEDDINGS

LITTLE — McDONALD
Mr. and Mrs. H. S. McDonald announce the marriage of their elder daughter, Muriel Jean, to Chauncey Orville Little, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Little, of Nanton, Alberta. The wedding took place at Calgary on Sunday, Aug. 18, at 10 p.m., at the manse, by Rev. E. Wm. Locke.

The bridal couple will reside at Byemore, Alberta.

CAIRNS — McDONALD
Claiming the interest of people in Alberta is the marriage in Toronto Saturday, August 17, of Margaret Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. C. McDonald of Coleman, to Dr. T. L. Cairns of Rochester, N.Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cairns of Edmonton. The groom is a member of the university staff in Rochester, and after a honeymoon in the Muskoka region the couple will make their home in that city.

Second Survey Soon
The cost-of-living commission, which found no cost-of-living increase is payable to coal employees for the six months period ending August 31, will make its second survey of prices in Alberta and British Columbia in the next four months, said David Matheson, secretary-treasurer of Edmonton district, United Mine Workers of America, this week.

If the cost of living rises five per cent above the March 31, 1938, index in the next four months, miners will receive a wage increase to take care of the extra living costs in accordance with an agreement between coal operators in the two provinces and the union, he said. The cost-of-living commission will make a report every four months.

Only miners in Alberta and British Columbia are covered by the commission's report.

Employees of the local companies have been busy since Saturday cleaning out Nez Perce creek which runs into the local water reservoir. A fence on both sides of the creek for one mile above the dam is being built and will prevent any cows or horses from straying into the creek and contaminating the water.

BUSINESS CHANGES
Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Montalbetti, proprietors of Modern Electric store, have purchased the Price property on Central avenue and expect to move into their new quarters shortly. Archie Wragg, proprietor of Archie's Radio and Electrical Service, has secured business and living quarters in the building formerly known as the Motor Inn.

Mr. Montalbetti will make radical changes to his new property. It is proposed to renovate the small store so that it will be joined with the house. Large store space will be made and plate glass windows installed. The living quarters will be at the back of the property. Increased stock will be secured, giving Coleman an up-to-date electrical store.

Renovation has started at the Motor Inn building, and Mr. Wragg expects to occupy his new premises at the beginning of September.

Mr. Elvins Spencer, formerly of Edmonton, was best man, and Mrs. A. M. Cairns of Toronto, sister-in-law of the groom, was matron-of-honor.

A reception was held at the home of the groom's brother, Mr. A. M. Cairns, and Mrs. Cairns. Guests included Miss Edith Gershaw from Medicine Hat.

To travel, the bride was in a brown and white printed crepe, with matching all length coat and white accessories.

Curlers to Meet Friday Evening

Discuss Feasibility of Repairing Arena Roof; Plan For Next Season.

A general meeting of the curling club will be held in the council chamber on Friday evening at 7 p.m. to discuss repairing the arena roof.

The roof is in bad shape and must be repaired before discussion can take place on next season's operations. President Andy Dow has called the meeting and it is hoped to discuss some plan which will culminate in the roof being fixed. All curlers are asked to make it a point to be present.

Pucksters And Stavely Meet in Provincial Final

First Games of Series at Local Diamond at 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Stavely's baseball team swept Patricia from their path as they marched into the provincial baseball finals where they will oppose Coleman Pucksters in a best-of-five game series. The first two games will be played here next Sunday at 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Stavely defeated Patricia by 10-0 and 5-2 scores on Sunday, having won the first two games the previous Sunday by scores of 5-0 and 3-0. The Stavely team is comprised of ball stars from the towns close by and it is a team well worth watching. Angelo Gentile and Bill Gate scored the team two weeks ago and although they admit the visitors possess a strong line-up they are of the opinion that when the series is all over Pucksters will still be wearing the provincial crown.

Good crowds are anticipated as fans are expected from B.C. and Alberta points.

Enemy Aliens to be Struck From Relief Rolls

Council Adheres to Instructions From Senior Governments; Government Takes Over Control of Recreational Ground at Lake.

At its regular meeting on Tuesday evening the council was in receipt of the senior governments' plan for dealing with single, married and enemy alien unemployed. The single unemployed, male or female, have been struck off the relief rolls; in the other two cases, age limit and number of dependent children govern whether or not they are eligible for relief. Much publicity has been given the plan in the dailies. At least three men will be struck from the local relief rolls due to the governments' action.

The Canadian Legion, represented by President Wm. Martland and Robert Lloyd, complained that water, either from a cesspool or ice box in the adjoining lot to the Legion building, was escaping and seeping through their basement, causing damage to the walls. The lot belongs to C. L. Goody. The council promised to see Mr. Goody and advise Legion officials of the outcome.

The B.C. Cafe came in for considerable discussion and Constable Antle was authorized to investigate certain matters and bring back a report for the next meeting, when action will be taken concerning this building.

Medical Health officers Drs. Rose and Claxton submitted their monthly report. The water supply was contaminated. Only remedy was to filter the water at its source. There were no cases of disease. 80 children had been vaccinated during the past month.

A letter was received from the provincial government informing council that in compliance with council's request of last September, the government will take back control of the recreational park at Crows Nest Lake. All tenants on this land will be dealt with directly by the government.

Constable D'Appollonia submitted his contract for hard-surfacing the portion of Third street and continuing around to Pryde's corner. Quotation was $640. This price did not include spreading, which would require the government grade and a number of men. He advised that owing to the weather beginning to break and the fact that he had no heating machine it was necessary that council authorize the work done right away or left over till next year. Council decided on the latter suggestion and the work has been placed on the book as the first project for 1941.

Mrs. N. Deputak asked for a load of wood. Request granted. The bill regarding Frank Mills, a transient, given medical attention by Dr. Rose, was again brought before the council. Letter was filed.

An insurance policy valued at $5,578 on the town hall, furniture, fire truck and equipment, expired during the month. The insurance rate submitted by the agent who carried the policy over the past three years was thought too high. All local agents have been requested to submit rates on this insurance.

Now Is The Time

"The invasion of Canada seems to be planned to take place between the months of July and October when full use may be made of the northern waters of Hudson Bay which are practically undefended."

The foregoing quotation in an article under the caption "Is Invasion Next?" which appeared in the August issue of New World, a pictorial journal published in Toronto, is not cited here with any desire to create unnecessary alarm, but the entire article does confirm the extreme importance of the steps which have been taken by the government to date for the defence of Canada and demonstrates the necessity of every citizen of the country being on the alert to thwart fifth column activities and to report any suspicious circumstances to the proper authorities when, unquestionably, they would be thoroughly investigated.

The latter recommendation is made on the assumption that the statements made in the article in question are based on facts and, in any event it must not be forgotten that Hitler's avowed objective is not merely the subjugation of Great Britain but the destruction of the entire British Empire, with Canada as one of the richest plums in prospect, if the programme could be carried out.

A German invasion of Canada, as pointed out in the article, presupposes defeat of Great Britain, but it would not be out of character for Hitler to make such an attempt without waiting for such a consummation of his plans against the "tight little Isle" if, thereby, it would further his policy of creating diversions in other parts of the world and causing embarrassment and difficulty for British and Empire arms in as many quarters as possible.

The history of the first year of the war in Europe, which has now spread into Africa and Asia, demonstrates the full weight of the Hitlerian plan of conquest always incorporates fifth column activities as a part of the use of guns and tanks, aeroplanes and bombs, armed ships and torpedoes as the weapons of invasion.

Not Fantasia, Perhaps

Briefly, the article referred to, accompanied by a map, reveals the purported plan for the invasion and occupation of Canada, said to have been adopted by the German high command in 1935, based on the recommendations of one, Colin Ross, a Nazi spy, who surveyed the country the previous year and blue-printed the routes for the invading army. His work is said to have covered the Dominion from the Atlantic coast to Regina and from the Arctic to the U.S. international boundary.

Using Iceland, Greenland and the Faroe Islands as stepping stones, the army of invasion is to be brought to Canadian shores in a great fleet, which, when split into three divisions will make their approaches through Labrador and Quebec, through Mooseone on St. James Bay and through Churchill on Hudson Bay. Ross is said to have reported that if his plan is followed, Canada could easily be dropped into the Nazi basket.

The plan may sound fantastic to residents of Western Canada who geographically, at least, appear at the present time to be remote from the battlefields of Europe, but, as the author of the article declares: "This Nazi agent's word can well be a warning of events to come. After all, did not Hitler always boast of his plans for conquest? That he was not believed was not his fault."

In the light of events of the past few months, there is nothing fantastic about Hitler's plans. They have been only too successful up to the point he undertook to tackle Great Britain. Two or three months ago, probably the whole world, outside of Germany, would have scoffed at the suggestion that France could be subdued and occupied and brought under the Nazi heel in the short space of two or three weeks. Was there not the Maginot line and was not the French army acknowledged by experts as the best in the world? But it happened and apparently, according to plan.

Only One Insurance

The people of Canada and of Great Britain have complete confidence in their belief that Britain will not, and cannot, be conquered. But, there is no assurance that some attempt will not be made against Canada, if Britain should suffer temporary reverses.

The only insurance against defeat, in the events of such an attempt being made against this country is full and complete preparedness, not only in men but in all resources of wealth and arms, high morale, unflinching indomitability, the will to sacrifice, a stern sense of duty and alertness against fifth column activities and subversive propaganda. And that means now. Tomorrow may be too late.

Allowances Grow With Forces

As the strength of Canada's armed forces increases from day to day, applications for allowances pour into the Dependents' Allowance Board in Ottawa in rising numbers. At present about 1,000 applications a day are being received. About $2,000,000 are paid out monthly in allowance cheques, about 70,000 in number. Four hundred accountants and clerks are kept busy dealing with these.

Second Experience

History repeated itself for William Taylor, special agent, Canadian National Railways at Antwerp, Belgium. Forced to flee German invaders in 1914, Taylor, outside got away by the "skin of my teeth," as the Nazis entered Antwerp in May last.

Fruit For England

A. G. Cameron, Australian minister of commerce and the navy, announced the sale to the British food of 750,000 cases of Australian canned apples, peaches and pears for £700,000 ($2,261,000). Bulk of the fruit has arrived in the United Kingdom, Mr. Cameron said.

Too Bad For Canary

This story of an air raid reached us from a southeast England town. A German bomb fell in the town; the explosion caused the bottom of a canary's cage to fall out; the canary fluttered to the floor, and the cat pounced on the canary and ate it.

School teaching in Chilopee, Mass., in 1713 was not a profitable profession. It paid 34 cents a week.

Evacuation Of Children

How They Are Being Looked After In Their Own Country

We have been reading so much about the evacuation of children from Britain to Canada that we may have had our interest dulled in the matter of how the evacuated-from-London children are being looked after in their own country. And so the following taken from an English woman's letter to a Canadian friend may be welcomed by some of my readers:

"I am fairly busy. On some days, if I am needed, I help at the children's canteen," so writes this Englishwoman. "The canteen serves diners to hundreds of London children evacuated here. The whole dinner is cooked by the Women's Voluntary Service, as is served by them, and all washing up is done by them. Some of the women doing this are wives and daughters of the well-to-do families of Sussex. All this is unpaid work, and is a great benefit to the houses where children are billeted, as it saves the women of the house preparing a dinner for those children billeted on her."

"This war has caused a tremendous domestic upheaval. Scarcely any families are together. It has now become quite usual to take a child into your home. Most of the children are now happily placed, and have got to their new homes. The Government now pays about 10 shillings a week to the hostess for each child. The parents add to this, if their means permit, and also supply clothes and pocket money. Wealthier parents pay full board and lodging. Children of the very poor pay nothing, and the Women's Voluntary Service make clothes for them. The whole situation is made harder by the number of Dutch, Belgian, Polish and Czech refugees."

The Channel Tunnel

Lucky For England That It Has Never Been Built

The London correspondent of the Ottawa Journal says: Surely we may take it for granted, after recent events, that we have heard the last of that Channel tunnel scheme? It used to crop up, with undiminished vigor and persuasion, every few years, and was always turned down by our military authorities. Latterly the advocates of the Channel tunnel seemed to be gaining strength, however, and even the military opponents to be weakening a bit.

What would be the position to-day, if a Channel tunnel existed, and the Germans held, as they would have done, the French end of that nexus? It is all very well to argue that we could easily have destroyed it, but would not the German higher command have taken it into their particular consideration, and whilst seizing the French end, also have made a realistic effort, by means of airborne troops and parachutists, to get control of our end before we had time to press the button?

And, apropos pressing the button that would blow the tunnel up, might not we have been faced by the dilemma that the tunnel was packed with our troop trains? The recent experience of the Meuse bridges, and Fifth Column activities, would be enough to give any Channel tunnel project in future years its coup de grace.

Picture Better Than Words

Clever Cartoon Shows Up Plans Of Nazis For Food

The Chinese, as we have observed before, have a saying that one picture is worth 10,000 words. The truth of that was exemplified the other day by a cartoon in the New York Post, by Rollin Kirby, which hits off the German plea to the United States to feed Europeans more effectively than an article of 10,000 words, or 1,000 words, would do.

The cartoon shows a round Nazi seated at a table, stuffing himself with food. Before him is a plate of fish, labeled "from Norway." There is a big ham from Poland, butter from Denmark, cheese from Holland, and a bottle of wine from France. Below it, says: "If anybody in Europe starves it won't be he."

That is the situation as it is, and as it would be if the British were soft-hearted enough to lift the blockade on food. "The Germans are robbing the occupied countries of food and taking it to Germany. If the blockade is lifted to admit 'relief' food the Nazis would take that, too, to keep their armies in fighting trim." —St. Thomas Times-Journal.

A German expelled by the French last year, as head of a spy ring, has been appointed ambassador to conquered France. He ought to feel right at home now.

Ruled Over Rich Province

Maharajah Of Mysore Dies After Reign Of 45 Years

The Maharajah of Mysore, Sri Krishnaraja Wodeyar Bahadur, died at Bombay, India, after a heart attack. He was 54 years old. The Maharajah, ruler of 4,500,000 persons and reputed to have a personal fortune of $400,000,000, was regarded as one of the wealthiest men in the world.

He was an exotic Indian prince, the first ruler of Mysore ever to leave his country. He travelled to London in 1938, taking his special water, special food and chef with him. He also took along the family goddess, a small golden image, called Chamundeshwari.

The Maharajah was a small slight and black-moustached figure with brilliant eyes and a low musical voice. He wore western clothes except for a turban, in which glinted threads of gold.

Mysore is the largest of the Indian states except Hyderabad. It is rich in gold, granite quarries and coal, with annual revenue of about $12,000,000.

The Maharajah belonged to the Khatriya or military caste of Hindus. He lived in a huge palace in Madras, where he maintained a fleet of 80 automobiles and once was host to King Edward, when the former monarch was Prince of Wales. The Maharajah was entitled to a salute of 21 guns.

The Maharajah's brother who would have been his heir, died March 10, 1940, at the age of 51. The Maharajah succeeded his father on the throne in 1895 and this was in the 45th year of his reign.

Women Bell Ringers

First One In England Rang Bell When Queen Victoria Died

"Before the last war women bell ringers were almost unheard of in England. Since then several hundred have entered the profession." This statement was made by the first feminine bell ringer in England, Mrs. J. C. Sullivan.

According to Mrs. Sullivan, the custom of ringing bells originated in England about 1600 and the art has changed little to this day. Originally the purpose of bell-ringing was to summon soldiers to arms as well as Christians to church. They also sounded the alarm in fire or tumult, and whoever commanded the bell commanded the town because at a moment's notice he could rally and concentrate his adherents.

More recently the ringing of bells in English villages has been reserved for Sunday church services and special occasions. Since the outbreak of the present war bell ringing has been forbidden and to-day the only occasion upon which the bells may ring is to warn the townspeople of German parachutists.

Mrs. Sullivan rang a muffled peal for the death of Queen Victoria. She rang the bells at the coronation of King Edward VII, and she aided for the late King George V.

Harmless Carbon Dioxide

New York Engineer Tells About Its Use In War

The gas surprise of this war is harmless carbon dioxide.

Carbon dioxide is the fizz of soft drinks, the collar on beer, the stuff that nature put in the air to make man breathe regularly.

With all nations set for poison gas as a result of experience in the First Great War, carbon dioxide stole in the back way.

It ferried the Germans across flooded Holland lowlands and European rivers. It is saving aviators on both sides from fire and from drowning.

The facts about the war uses of this gas come from Walter Kilde, New York engineer, one of the pioneers in use of carbon dioxide for fire fighting.

A bottle about twice the size of the family quart-of-milk container is attached to folded rubber boats. It is filled with liquefied carbon dioxide, which is carbon dioxide gas under pressure.

The turn of a valve releases this liquid, which expands so fast it rushes out as gas and inflates a large boat in a few seconds. That's how the Nazis crossed the water defences on the lowlands.

The aviator who has to bail out over water yanks a cord which in three seconds opens a tiny bottle of liquid carbon dioxide that inflates his vest to the volume of a life preserver.

Sold On Air Travel

Ten years ago Mrs. M. J. Pile, of Winnipeg, said that if she lived to celebrate her eightieth birthday, she would do it in the air. Came the big day—and she climbed into a plane at the Stevenson airport for a half-hour flight. It was her first journey among the clouds, but on landing she remarked, "From now on I go by plane."

Ontario's capital should not get an exalted idea of its own importance. A modest citizen points out there is a Toronto in Australia, another in Ohio and still another in South Dakota. "Toronto" is an Indian word meaning "collection of huts."

Halifax Hotel Built On Soil Brought As Ballast From Boston

There is some corner of a foreign field that is forever Boston, proudly points out the Hub's Evening Transcript, and says:

"The Nova Scotia, Canadian National Railways Hotel at Halifax, is built on soil brought from Boston Common."

"Now why, you ask, should soil ever be transported from Boston Common to Halifax? It is an accident of the days of sailing ships. The soil was carried as ballast."

NOTES AND COMMENTS

SHORTENING days remind us that Fall is approaching. The ever changing seasons give variety to life, and nowhere is this variety more marked than on the farms or in the mountains. To city dwellers the change of seasons means little more than from the heat and humidity of summer to the cold and slush of winter. On the farm it is different.
The grain ripens, there is the chill of the early morn and late evening, with possibly a touch of frost in the higher altitudes, while on the foothills and mountain slopes the trees and foliage begin to change into many hued colors as the Fall season advances. It reminds one of the ever changing scenes of life in general, of the joys and pleasures that surround us if we are not too engrossed with our daily tasks to pause and take note of them.

THERE is a trip available to most people living in this district and that is through the Crows Nest Pass. It is one of ever changing variety, from the prairie areas east of Macleod, to the crest of the Rockies at Crows Nest, divisional point of the Canadian Pacific Railway on its Medicine Hat to Vancouver division. Leaving Macleod, you are immediately attracted by the sight of the mountains boldly outlined about sixty miles distant. From an altitude of more than 3,000 feet you steadily ascend to the maximum of 4,400 at Crows Nest. On the way you pass farms nestling in the valleys of the foothills, looking so comfortable from a distance; through the Indian reserve named after the Peigans, and on which are two fine schools, under the jurisdiction of the Department of Indian Affairs, and supervised respectively by the Church of England and the Roman Catholic church.
On through the Doukhobor colony surrounding Cowley, where women may be seen during harvest diligently stooking the grain, and wearing their brilliantly colored dresses, past Lundbreck Falls, scene of the tragic death in 1929 of two young people whose car slid into the river below the Falls, and on to the famous bituminous coal mining areas which mean much from an industrial point to Alberta.

IT is of interest to review the changes of the past fifty years in this region. Pack trails through the mountains preceded the railroad, which was built from Macleod in 1897. Roads that later followed were rough and at times it almost seemed an art to balance a wagon, or later a car, on the winding roads around the hills. Then came the need for surfaced roads, while most revolutionary of all in transportation was the development of Trans-Canada Airways, whose planes twice daily each way fly over the mountain ranges at an altitude of from twelve to fourteen thousand feet, and carry you from Lethbridge to Vancouver in less than three hours.

THE Crows Nest Pass has tragedy linked with its history. It was in 1914 that 190 lives were snuffed out in an explosion at Hillcrest Collieries; earlier than that, in 1903, the famous Frank slide buried nearly a hundred people without a second's warning, when early in the morning of April 26 millions of tons of rock came hurtling down from a peak more than 3,000 feet above the town of Frank to wipe out a large portion of the town and cover almost a square mile of the valley.

INDUSTRIALLY the steam coal mines of the Crows Nest Pass constitute a very valuable asset to Alberta. With a producing capacity of between eleven and twelve thousand tons daily, and furnishing employment to about two thousand people, it can readily be seen that the coal mining industry is a very valuable factor, the importance of which is not realized by the majority of the people of the province. Not only is the premier railroad system of Canada, the Canadian Pacific, but to the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. Ltd., are vast quantities of coal and coke shipped annually, and for war's demands these mines are ready to supply the heaviest demands at a moment's notice. Alberta as a whole is the most diversified and most richly endowed with natural resources of any province in Canada. Its magnificent scenery, its vast national parks, its bracing climate, combine to make it a province of which we can justly feel proud, and it is a province where there still abound opportunities for advancement for those who are willing to follow the example of those who came earlier, who saw what a glorious future it held, and who worked to make their dreams come true.

AROUND town are to be seen some very fine flower gardens. They appear at their best in late August with a blaze of blossoms in glorious splendour.
A garden is a fine thing for all to behold, and no matter how humble a home may be, if it is surrounded by a garden it gives it an atmosphere of peace and content-such as nothing can take the place of. It brings to mind the plan followed in many places of holding each year a horticultural exhibition, whereby there is provided an incentive for more beautiful gardens, and prizes awarded to competitors.

LIGHTNING CALCULATION

A farmer boarding a city-bound train found himself next to a man who was acting most strangely—glancing quickly out of the window, muttering to himself, glancing again. Curiosity overpowered him, and he asked the stranger
if anything were the matter. "No indeed," was the answer. "I'm a lightning calculator, you see. Just for fun I count the number of cars parked in the street as we pass towns, the number of people in the stations, the number of trees in a grove—I never make a mistake." "Wonderful," said the farmer. "In a few moments we're going to pass my pasture. I know the exact number of cows grazing there—would you care . . . ?"
The calculator was delighted to be put to the test. As the train flashed past he gave one glance at the cows and announced "157."
"Amazing," exclaimed the farmer.
"How did you do it?" "It's easy," replied the calculator. "All I did was to count the cows tents and divide by four."—Reader's Digest

CARNIVAL RECEIPTS BELOW PREVIOUS YEAR

Smaller Revenue From Major Prizes Given as Reason. Prizes in Booths Expensive.

Receipts from the Elks' carnival failed to match those of previous years and as a result only a few hundred dollars profit was derived.

Revenue from the major prizes, a source which usually gives the carnival committee its margin of profit, was below last year's receipts and since the booths usually only manage to hold their own the profit naturally was much less. It is to be regretted that the carnival failed to meet expectations as the Elks worked hard to make it a big success.

The money derived however will be placed in the fund for war charities.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

The second contingent of airmen from Southern Rhodesia to reach England since the outbreak of war has arrived safely.

The United States senate approved unanimously legislation to permit American ships to remove child refugees from war zones.

Mount Mihara, Japan's famous suicide volcano off the entrance of Tokyo bay, erupted spectacularly after 17 years of comparative inactivity.

The Canadian Red Cross Society has authorized the establishment of a second Maple Leaf Club for accommodation of Canadian troops on leave in London, Eng.

Royal Air Force planes dropped 40,000 tons of bombs on enemy territory in a period of one month, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported.

The government expects the Unemployment Insurance Act will begin operation this fall, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told a press conference.

The Association of American Railroad reported the 584 persons—the greatest number since the first half of 1931—were killed in highway-railroad grade crossing accidents during the first six months of 1940.

The United States War Department signed a contract with the Hercules Powder Company for a $25,000,000 munitions powder plant to be built on a 2,500-acre site near Radford, Va.

A spokesman for the British Purchasing Commission said that munitions orders placed in the United States are being "constantly accelerated," and that the "lead in shipments to England is infinitesimal."

Has Large Feet

Canadian Soldier In England Has Trouble Getting Fitted With Shoes

Pte. P. J. Walsh of Hamilton, who arrived in England with the 2nd Canadian Division, thinks everything is grand about the Old Country except its shoe stores. Although he has visited every shop within a radius of several miles from his camp he hasn't been able to find a pair of shoes to fit him.

But there is a good reason—the rangy lad requires a size 14 fitting. "I guess I'll just have to do the same as I did back home and have a pair made specially for me," Walsh said. "And believe me I'm playing safe for they tell me it takes months to fill a casual order like that."

Known to his colleagues as the "Shadow," the Hamilton boy is proud of his underpinnings and good-naturedly brushes aside the kidding he gets from the gang. He believes there are only two other soldiers in the Canadian army who wear shoes larger than his.

"Coming across my pals stuck pretty close to me," Walsh chuckled. "They had arranged to use my spare boots for a getaway in case we were torpedeed."

It seems that Goering prefers guns to butter and uniforms to guns.

New Remedy Discovered

Apple Seeds Said To Restore Wasted Muscles In Animals

Apple seeds are rich in a muscle-regulating substance, probably a vitamin, whose discovery was described at the University of Oregon Medical School.

Eating ground apple seeds, or drinking the oil which is pressed from them, both caused remarkable recoveries in animals near death with wasted muscles.

The apple seed properties were found in experiments in the nutritional research laboratory, under direction of Dr. Ira A. Maxwell, clinical associate professor of medicine.

The muscular disease from which the animals, rabbits, guinea pigs and rats, suffered were experimental, that is, induced, but they were precisely the same as a serious class of human ill. Lou Gehrig's trouble is one of this kind.

TRIM, VIVACIOUS COTTON

Last year American women spent $850,000,000 on cosmetics—enough money to pay for a fleet of eighteen new-type cruisers, or to build six towering Empire State buildings. Cosmetics bear many descriptive names—these, by way of example: contour cream, crows-foot cream, deep pore cleanser, eyelash grower, eye-wrinkle cream, scalp food, hair color restorer, rejuvenating cream, muscle oil, skin food, wrinkle extractor, skin tonic. But these descriptive names have been condemned as misleading and their coding use is forbidden. It is said, by the authorities at Washington, as a sort of "refinement," that "though youth cannot be restored to the skin by cosmetics, the use of cosmetics may give a more youthful appearance; and though there are no known preparations which will remove wrinkles, preparations properly applied with massage and exercise may prevent or retard the formation of wrinkles and crows-foot, or tend to cause them gradually to diminish; that while there is no known preparation which

By JOHN C. KIRKWOOD

Canadian wood is in good demand. From it are made boxes for ammunition and supplies; it is needed for the building of aeroplanes, dirigibles, dug-outs, shelters, pontoon bridges, and for railway ties. Wood is used in the manufacture of the stock of rifles and light machine guns. Cart-ridge wrappers consist of paper made from wood pulp. Large quantities of fibre-board and corrugated board are used in packaging. Purified wood pulp yields cellulose nitrate or gun-cotton used as an explosive for demolitions and as the chief ingredient of smokeless powders, photographic films, collodion and celluloid plastics. Dynamite, of which wood fibre forms an appreciable part, is employed for many purposes other than war. Specially prepared charcoal is the chief working substance in gas masks.

Wood is an important auxiliary war material. Rayon and staple fibre from wood pulp can be more extensively used in place of cotton. Producer gas from wood and charcoal may be used for the development of automobiles and trucks, and so can release quantities of gasoline for military purposes.

... Last year American women spent $850,000,000 on cosmetics—enough money to pay for a fleet of eighteen new-type cruisers, or to build six towering Empire State buildings. Cosmetics bear many descriptive names—these, by way of example: contour cream, crows-foot cream, deep pore cleanser, eyelash grower, eye-wrinkle cream, scalp food, hair color restorer, rejuvenating cream, muscle oil, skin food, wrinkle extractor, skin tonic. will actually prevent or remove blackheads, proper care of the skin and the use of certain preparations may tend to prevent blackheads from forming, or may tend to open pores and loosen foreign matter. Natural oils of the skin cannot be replaced by external preparations, but dryness of the skin may be relieved by the application of certain preparations.

Thus it is seen that cosmetics have their values. ... Hay fever bread! You eat bread—a few slices—and you get relief—maybe. But the bread is very special, and is patented. According to the new treatment, the offending pollen is fermented with yeast. The composition product thus formed may then be incorporated in flour, or any type of food. Or pollen may be added to unfarmed grape juice. After fermentation the resulting grape juice when imbibed is said to relieve hay fever.

This treatment requires the ripening of the pollen—not its anticipatory removal. The pollen must stay on the plant whose pollen it carries. Hay fever. Also, it means the harvesting of the pollen. Until this new treatment has developed a reassuring history, a hay fever sufferer is well advised to go along the path which he knows surely will give him relief.

... One unexpected by-product of London's blackout is a return of the old-fashioned habit of carrying cans that tap one's way through the dark. Many a can which has not been carried since its owner was a young blade has come back into use. New cans, specially made for the blackout, have appeared, some of them painted white so that they can be seen in the dark, some with luminous strip or torches in their handles.

The demand for cans has revealed a severe shortage of can-makers. Twenty-five years ago the best-known factory in London employed 800 workers. Its successor today employs 100. Cane material is not easy to obtain. Malacca has to come from Malaya. Even English ash and chestnut are not very plentiful, for old growers have gone out of business.

Flying High

Now Travelling By Stratoliner Across The Continent

The name given to some passenger airplanes is "stratoliner," this because this type of airplane flies at high altitudes, where weather is no problem or hindrance. On one of these planes you can travel from New York to Los Angeles in 12 hours, 13 minutes, and from Los Angeles to New York in 14 hours, nine minutes. You will travel in very great comfort—in spacious quarters. There are four passenger compartments, each in a different pastel color. There is accommodation for 24 passengers, with separate dressing rooms for men and women.

In the stratoliner fresh air is drawn through the edges of each wing, and is circulated through the cabin by two superchargers, which, at the same time, compress the air to the right "thickness." This makes it possible for the plane to travel at 17,000 feet with the passengers breathing the same kind of air they would have at 8,000 feet. The cost of a transcontinental journey is $150.

Nazis Close Paris Park

French press reports said that the famous Paris park, the Bois de Boulogne, has been closed to Parisians by the German authorities as the result of shots fired by an unidentified person on a German sentry there. The Germans, according to these reports, closed the 2,095-acre park to French police as well as civilians.

WAR COMES TO BEAUTIFUL LAKE O'HARA

But it's a movie war, filmed by a British company in Canada this summer, and soon to be seen in the dramatic picture, "49th Parallel." Above is seen the camp of Leslie Howard, who plays the part of an English nationalist, at Lake O'Hara near the mountain line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. In the picture Howard becomes unwilling host to two escaping Nazi submarine officers who have made their way inland after their craft has been sunk in Hudson Bay. One of the Nazis is seen in the foreground while at the right Director Michael Powell and Chief Cameraman Fred Young grind out the action.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SEPTEMBER 1

PRaising GOD FOR HIS BLESSINGS

Golden text: Bless the Lord, O my soul. And forget not all his benefits. Psalm 103:2. Lesson: Psalms 103; 107. Devotional reading: Psalm 114:12-19.

Explanations and Comments

Praising God for His Blessings, Psalm 103:1-5. Bless Jehovah, O my soul; thus the psalmist addresses himself. "The Semitic languages have no word for 'self.' If the Syriac has to render 'a kingdom divided against itself,' it says, 'a kingdom divided against its soul.' If it has to render 'yourself' it must needs say 'your souls.' And all that is within me—my whole self, my whole being, all my faculties and powers—bless his holy name. Name" stands for "person," bless him who is holy.

Bless Jehovah, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits. Forget none of them! Take note of them for granted. How often is forgetfulness the cause of ingratitude! "Worthwhile has an oft quoted passage in which he declares that he is pained at heart because of the little that they have received from him; he felt that their gratitude was so far in excess of his gift or service. But our gratitude can never be in excess of our obligation to the Great Giver. When we think of 'all his benefits' we think of 'infinity.' (W. L. Watkinson.)

Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who heareth all thy diseases. "Is not the recuperative power of nature God's own healing touch? Had he not endowed our bodies with the which restores them from accident and sickness, no bone would ever set, no wound ever close, no patient ever recover. And so it is with the deeper maladies of the soul." (W. L. Watkinson.)

The hospital that has blazing in the hallway by which one enters, the words "All healing is divine," reflects the spirit of the psalmist, and tells the ultimate truth." (Rolih H. Walker.)

Who redeemeth thy life (thyself) from destruction. "Destruction" stands for "Shoel," which is here pictured as claiming the psalmist when the point of dying; but Jehovah paid, as it were, the ransom, and so brought him back to health and life."

Prepare For Gigantic Task Of Digging New Ditch

Bernard L. Burdick, chief of Panama Canal's office at Washington, disclosed that preparations were almost complete for the gigantic task of digging a new $27,000,000 channel in the United States "big ditch" between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The new locks—designed as a defense measure to reduce the canal's vulnerability to bombing and sabotage—will constitute the waterway's third set, and will be restricted to United States navy use alone. Engineers estimate that six years normally would be required to complete the locks, but they hope to do the job in less time.

Burdick said he already had hired 2,000 new workers and shipped them to the zone.

The three new sets of locks will parallel the existing ones at Gatun, Pedro Miguel and Miraflores.

Health LEAGUE of CANADA

presents TOPICS of VITAL INTEREST by DR. J. W. S. McCULLOUGH

HEALTH EDUCATION

A 52-page manual "Motorist's Manual" issued by the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Ontario Department of Highways, was warmly commended to the people of Canada as a "valuable piece of health education" by officials of the Health League of Canada.

While primarily engaged in public education for the prevention of sickness, the Health League of Canada is also vitally interested in the prevention of accidents. Loss of health and life through motor accidents has been appalling in recent years, the League pointed out.

Half of the new "Motorist's Manual" is devoted to driving regulations describing who has the right of way, how to make a turn, rules about passing street cars, signals to other motorists, parking, traffic signals and municipal by-laws. In another part of the booklet "First Aid Reminders" are given.

"The doctor should be called whenever anyone has a broken bone," the first item reads. "The patient should not be moved until someone has applied a suitable splint or bandage. Bleeding should be stopped as soon as possible, and no wound should be bandaged until bleeding has been stopped. These rules are suggested for wounds and for shock: Examine for bleeding: Lay patient on his back. Cover patient and keep him warm. Keep his head low. Loosen his clothing. Rub his arms and legs toward the body."

Don't ask him questions. Turn his head to one side if he starts to vomit. Have him breathe aromatic spirits of ammonia. Don't move him unless absolutely necessary.

National Registration

Carried Into Far North By Airplane And Dog Team

National registration will be carried into the Far North by airplane, boat and dog team but the registrars will have five months in which to do their jobs instead of the three days allotted outside the Northwest Territories for the general public.

This task has been assigned to the Northwest Territorial administration but because of the huge area to be covered and the widely scattered population, the period of registration has been fixed as from August 15, 1940, to January 1, 1941.

The territories have been divided into seven districts. Eskimos and Indians are not being registered but there will be a scattered population of hunters, trappers, prospectors, mine workers and those engaged in services to the Arctic pioneers, who will be required to register.

Major McKeand will direct registrations at the various settlements to be touched by the annual Eastern Arctic patrol on board the Northern supply ship Nascapic, and he will deputize Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers or other reliable parties to complete the task at other points.

Gestapo Busy In France

What might have been expected is happening in Germany-occupied France. Already it is learned that 17,000 political arrests have been made by the Gestapo, including many Frenchmen who have been anti-Hitler, as well as many refugees who fled Germany when Hitler reached power.

Iron Lung Patient In Vancouver Hopes To Do His Bit

More than 1,200 patients at Vancouver General hospital were registered among them a 22-year-old "iron lung" inmate who hoped that he'd be able "to do his bit later on."

"I can't do much right now," said the boy, who wished to be known only as "Bob," "but I'm taking a correspondence course in electricity and will be able to do my bit later on, maybe."

He has been in the iron lung for more than two years.

Hospitals For Airplanes

The Department of Munitions and Supply has entered into contracts with firms in various centres throughout Canada to provide overhauling and repair facilities for airplanes used for training and other purposes. After a certain number of hours in the air, planes and engines must be dismantled, repaired and tightened up.

A machine to provide small change when coins are dropped into a slot has been invented by two residents of Nashville, Tenn.

It required a perceptible effort in Aileen to produce the paper she had found in the grate of Mr. Harlow's library. She had the unhappy knowledge that whilst this big man had put her in her place, she hadn't stayed there. She had gone down into deplorable depths. He might be anything that Jim believed, but to his own plane he had a claim to greatness.

When she reached that conclusion she felt that it was time to hand the paper to her companion.

"I'm not going to excuse myself," she said frankly. "It was an abominable thing to do, and I won't even say that I had you in my mind. It was just vulgar curiosity made me do it."

They stopped under a street standard and he opened the paper and read the message.

"Marling!" he gasped. "Good God!"

"What is it?"

The effect of those scribbled words upon her companion astounded her. Presently he folded the paper very carefully and put it in his pocket.

"Starting, Ingle, Mrs. Gibbins," he said, in his old bantering mood. "Put me together the pieces of this jigsaw puzzle, and connect if you can the note of the Mr. Marling, who wishes to retain his writing materials; your disreputable uncle who has developed a craze for the cinematograph; fit in the piece which stands for Mrs. Gibbins and her beloved James Smith; explain a certain letter that was never posted and never delivered, yet was found in a frozen puddle—I nearly said puzzle—made of all these one intelligible picture."

"What on earth are you talking about?" she asked helplessly. He shook his head.

"You don't know? Elk doesn't know. I'm not so sure that I know, but I wish the next ten days were through!"

CHAPTER XIV.

For some reason which she could not explain to herself, Aileen was irritated.

"Do you realize how horribly mysterious you are?" she asked, almost tartly. "I always thought that the mystery of detectives was an illusion fostered by sensational writers."

"All mystery is illusion," he said grandly.

They had reached Oxford Street.

"Have you ever been to the House of Commons?" he asked her suddenly.

his reply. His voice was husky; he had a dozen queer mannerisms of speech and gesture that fascinated her. And then Jim's hand touched her.

"I'm going down to see him. Will you wait for me in the lobby?" he whispered, and she nodded.

It was ten minutes before the Foreign Minister came out of the house, greeted the detective with a wave of his hand and put his arm in Jim's.

"Well, what is the news?" he asked when they reached his private room. "Harlow again, eh? Something dark and sinister going on in Continental circles of diplomacy?"

He chuckled at the joke of it as he sat down at his pipe table and filled his pipe from a tin of tobacco that stood at his elbow.

"Harlow, Harlow!" he said, with good-humored impatience. "Everybody is telling me about Harlow! I'm going to have a talk with the fellow. He is giving a dinner party on Tuesday and I've promised to look in before I come to the House."

"What is the excuse for the dinner?" asked Jim, interested.

The Minister laughed. "He is a secret diplomat, if you like. He has fixed up a very unpleasant little quarrel which might have developed in the Balkans—really it amounted to a row between two bloodthirsty brigands—and he is giving a sort of love-branch dinner to the Ambassadors of the two states concerned. I can't go to the dinner, but I shall go to the reception afterward. Well," he asked abruptly, "what is your news?"

"I came here to get news, not to give it, Sir Joseph," said Jim. "That well-known code is not developing?"

"Pshaw!" said the Minister impatiently. "Cloud?"

"The Bonn incident?" suggested Jim, and Sir Joseph exploded.

"There was no incident! It was a vulgar slanging match between an elderly and pompous staff colonel and an impudent puppy of a French sous-officier. The young man has been disciplined by the French and the colonel has been relieved of his post by the War Office. And that is the end of a so-called incident."

Jim rejoined the girl soon after, and found that that Parliament had not greatly impressed her. Perhaps her mood was to blame that she found him a rather dull companion; for the rest of the evening, whilst she was with him, she did most of the talking, and he replied either in monosyllables or he sat at all the moment he would like enough to suspect that something unusual must have happened, and did not bicker him on his long silence.

At the door of her boarding house she found a note pinned to the door.

"You won't object to Brown staying on?"

"I intended speaking about him," she said. "Why am I under observation—that is the term, isn't it?"

"But do you mind?"

"No," she said, shaking her head. "It is rather funny."

"A sense of humor is a great thing," he replied, and that was his farewell.

Elk was not at Scotland Yard. He went up to the Great Eastern Road, where the inspector had his lodgings, and he was distinctly piqued to learn that Elk knew all about the Harlow dinner.

"I only got to know this afternoon, though," said Elk. "If you'd been at the Yard I could have told you—the thing was only organized yesterday. We shouldn't have heard anything about it, but Harlow applied for two policemen to be on duty outside the house. Swift worked."

Harlow. His small eyes surveyed Jim Carlton gravely. "Tell you something else, son; Ratas have bought a new office building in Moorgate street. I forget the name of the fellow who had it—a Jew with an Irish name. Anyway, Ellenbury took over yesterday—got in a double staff. He is a fellow you might see."

"He is a fellow I intend seeing," said Jim. "What is he now—lawyer or financier?"

"A lawyer. But he knows as much about finance as law. I've got an idea he's on the crook. We've never had a complaint against him, though there was a whisper once about his personal position. In the old days he used to act for some mighty queer people, and I think he lost money on the Stock Exchange."

"He's the man who lives at Norwood?"

Elk nodded.

"Norwood," he said deliberately; "the house where the letters were posted to Mrs. Gibbins. I wondered you hadn't seen him before—no, I haven't, though." He reconsidered. "You didn't want to make Harlow think that you are not that Gibbins business."

He stroked his nose thoughtfully. "Yuh, that's it. I don't know you. You might call on him on some excuse, but you'll have to be careful."

"How does he get from Norwood to the city?"

Elk shook his head.

"He's not the kind of fellow you can pick up in the train," he said.

"He runs a hired car which Ratas pay for. Royalton House is his address. It's an old brick box near the Crystal Palace. He lives there with his wife—an invalid. He hasn't any other people, unless there is a friend of Harlow's puts him on the list. And he's not approachable any other way. He doesn't work in Norwood, but has a little office in Theobald's Road, and if you call his clerk will see you and tell you that he is very sorry but Mr. Ellenbury can't give you an appointment till the autumn of 1935! But Ellenbury might tell something, if you could get at him."

"You are certain that Ellenbury is working with Harlow?"

"Working with him?" Elk said contemptuously but unerringly into the fire. "I should say he was! They're like brothers—up to a point. Do you remember the police station on Tuesday and I've promised to look in before I come to the House?"

"What is the excuse for the dinner?" asked Jim, interested.

The Minister laughed. "He is a secret diplomat, if you like. illusions? Were they hysterical? Didn't Mrs. Ellenbury think that if she made an effort she could get up from her bed, for, say, half an hour a day?

The truth was that Mrs. Ellenbury, having during her life experienced most of the sensations which are peculiar to womanhood, having walked and worked, directed servants, given little parties, made calls, witnessed theatrical entertainments, played croquet and tennis, had decided more than 20 years ago that there was nothing quite as comfortable as lying in bed. So she became an invalid, had a treble subscription to a library, and acquired a very considerable acquaintance with the routines of society, as depicted by authors who were authorities on misunderstood wives.

In a sense Mr. Ellenbury was quite content that this condition of affairs should be as it was. Once he was satisfied that his wife, in whom he had the most friendly interest, was suffering no pain, he was satisfied to return to the bachelor life. Every morning and every night (when he returned home at a reasonable hour) he went into her room and asked:

"How are you to-day?"

"About the same—certainly no worse."

"That's fine! Is there anything you want?"

"No, thank you—I have everything."

This exchange varied slightly from day to day, but generally it followed on those lines.

Ellenbury had come back late from East after his firing day. Usually he directed the Ratas Syndicate from his own office; indeed, he had never before appeared visibly in the operations of the company. But this new coup of Harlow's was so gigantic a scale that he must appear in the daylight, and his connection with a concern suspected by every reputable firm in the city must be public property. And that hurt him. He, who had secretly robbed his clients, who had engaged in systematic embezzlement and might now, but for the intervention and help of Mr. Stratford Harlow, have been an inmate of Dartmoor, walked with shame under the stigma of his known connection with a firm which was openly described as unsavory.

He was the creature of Harlow, his slave. This sore place in his self-esteem he never healed. It was his recreation to brood upon the ignominy of his lot. He hated Harlow with a malignancy that none, seeing his mild, worn face, would suspect.

Skilled Workers Are Preferred

"Jobs are few for unskilled workers," says the employment agent. "We will be better able to place you if you acquire a skill. Shorthand, for instance, isn't hard to learn and is a fine asset."

Yes, shorthand is an entering wedge for almost any type of career you choose. And you can teach yourself shorthand at home.

The popular Pitman system is just a quicker way of writing. Instead of spelling out a word, you write two or three brief symbols for the way it sounds. "Plan" looks like an S with a dot. "Company" is a curve with three dots.

The same few sounds will recur in all the words your employer dictates; so you won't have many symbols to learn. And, with regular practice, saying the words aloud to train your pencil and your ear to work together, you'll soon be taking real office-speed dictation.

On the job you'll find the Pitman short forms big time-savers. For terms often used, like "delivery," you have extra-brief symbols.

Qualify for a well-paid job. Our 32-page "Self-Instruction in Shorthand" Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermott Ave. E., Winnipeg, Man.
